About Projeto Entre Serras:

Projeto Entre Serras (PES_CE) is an European project gathering eight institutional partners across Portugal, Spain and France. PES is an open investigation to rurality in mountains, that includes artistic actions with public engagement, scientific and traditional knowledge, meetings and exchanges. It includes various forms of art practices in rural areas, but also in its relationship to the urban environment. Can artists drive local economies, identities and culture itself? This question will be addressed at this PES_CE artistic residency inspired by the unique mountains' environments of Serra da Estrela (Portugal) and the Southern French Alps (France): HUMUS (Associação Geopark Estrela/AGE and Cairn foyer d'art contemporain /CDLB).

About the HUMUS Art Residency (Summary):

Humus is a cross-national artistic residency between the UNESCO Global Geopark of Estrela (PT) and the City of Digne-les-Bains, in the Alps of High Provence (FR), within the frame of Projeto Entre Serras_Creative Europe. It focuses on the topic of pastoralism and transhumance, promoted on the 5th of December 2023 as Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity by the UNESCO.

Additional information:

The movement of shepherds with their herds across the territory is called transhumance. This word derives from "trans" (other) and "humus" (earth). It seems that the term "human" may also derive from "humus", meaning a creature with its feet on the ground, as opposed to gods in the sky. Shepherds have their feet on the ground because they follow the rhythm of the seasons, an ecological time. Their basic knowledge took millennia to build, and now they just have to read natural clues: they easily know when a field is able to support a flock, and when it is time to move and find a better pasture. Transhumance is of crucial importance in mountain regions, because consistent grazing over millennia gave rise to highly diverse pastures in altitude. Grazing abandonment results in the spread of a few dominant plant species, risks the survival of endemic rare species, creates more monotonous landscapes, and increases the risk of wildfires. In recent times, transhumance has also been associated with local development through tourism. Yet it is an activity in extinction.

In Serra da Estrela, only a few shepherds still practice transhumance. At the start of the Summer, they climb the mountain with their herds, staying at pastures of higher altitude for three months. They repeat a movement that has been going on for thousands of years.

Driven by an investigation of its territory in the Alps, CAIRN has already run two artistic residencies about transhumance since, yet new initiatives are being undertaken on the larger pastoralism issue today : Till Roeskens produced a work enlightening the memory of an ancient shepherd re-creating the path he used in his earlier days to walk and experience history. In 2023, himself and artist Elsa Noyons met and listened to old and younger shepherds along the hiking trail of La Routo (GR69) following the historical tracks of pastors from the Marseille area to Italy, passing by Digne-les-Bains. In this way, individual memory became part of the collective history. It continues to explore the subject with PES_CE.

The HUMUS Residency has a Part 1 in Serra da Estrela (PT) (June/July 2024), where the artist is expected to follow a shepherd taking his sheep and goats to upper pastures (a trip of about 12 km, lasting about 5 hours). Part 2 of the Residence will take place in the Alpes de Haute Provence (FR) (2024, precise dates to be confirmed).

At the end of the Residency, the artist delivers a written summary and images with photographs and videos about his/her work, to be used at the Castelo Branco (PT 2024), and Arles (FR 2024) conferences. Art work to be displayed at the final PES_CE exhibition (Malpartida Vostell Museum, SP 2025) should be delivered by the artist until the 1st December 2024. Also, the artist's work will feature on the PES_CE website and social media, and in the project's final book.

CAIRN / CDLB

First initiative of its kind and recently labeled 'Centre of art of national interest' by the Culture Ministry of France, Cairn pursues its unconventional program based solely on long-term artists residencies in territory, around the city of Digne-les-Bains.

In the Provençal Southern Alps, artists invited by Cairn find echoes to their own artistic research through the lens of unsuspected stories belonging to a rich, old and contemporary rural heritage. This includes interdisciplinary facets such as sports, science, agriculture, tourism, archeology and many more. Cairn therefore opens debates participating in a broader reflection on the futures and the development model alternatives for sustainable countryside areas.

Cairn receives internationally renowned artists such as Andy Goldsworthy, Lara Almarcegui, Hicham Berrada. Part of its program supports emerging artists as well as experimental practices.
